

Pitlochry Serenity Garden

We began work on the Serenity Garden at Holy Trinity Church in 2019 thanks to a legacy left to the church by Christopher and Audrey Grant and funding from the Co-op Community Fund. The garden is cared for by a small group of volunteers who meet each Tuesday morning to toil away, is open for community use 24 hours a day, 7 days a week and is totally free to visit. Follow the entry signs and read our story on the information attached to the shed.

In this peaceful place you will find much to enjoy, there are picnic tables and seating throughout for folks to come and go, contemplate, pray, eat and to just be. A large Celtic cross is laid out in the ground, with a small herb garden. There are raised beds where we grow flowers for the church and vegetables for the community's use, and wooden animals, fairy doors and books to discover throughout the garden as well as a Prayer Walk for you to use. As you come through the lych gate, you will find leaflets and guides to the garden and its activitieswill you find them all I wonder?

Development in the garden is continuous and we are currently working at the rear of the garden, at the head of the Celtic Cross. Follow the winding path through the trees, where we plan to create a wild meadow, an area of white shrubs, sensory and musical areas, a cairn to remember loved ones, a draughts board with butterfly and ladybird 'draughts' and a notice board with information about nature.

Everyone is very welcome, and if you visit on a Tuesday morning you will definitely be entertained by the volunteers. We look forward to seeing you.
